This session will be held virtually to support participation from providers and partners across Nevada's rural and frontier communities.

Purpose of the Listening Session

NVHA is hosting this workshop to introduce rural, frontier, and Tribal healthcare providers and partners to the CMS Health IT Ecosystem in support of Nevada's Rural Health Transformation Program (RHTP) and forthcoming Rural Health Innovation & Technology (RHIT) funding opportunity. This workshop will explain how CMS health technology standards align with provider-led initiatives, including strengthening digital infrastructure and interoperability; advancing cybersecurity readiness; supporting telehealth and AI-enabled care; and expanding data-driven care delivery in rural settings

Who Should Attend?

All are welcome, including but not limited to:

- Rural and frontier healthcare providers and provider organizations
- Tribal Nations, Tribal health organizations, and Tribal healthcare providers
- Provider-led or regional consortia
- Counties, local governments, community-based organizations, and academic institutions

Why NVHA Is Holding This Session

NVHA is engaging providers early to clarify how the CMS Health IT Ecosystem aligns with Nevada's forthcoming RHIT funding opportunity. Early understanding is intended to support RHIT-funded projects that align with national standards, integrate with broader health IT initiatives, and promote sustainable, technology-enabled healthcare access in rural and frontier communities.

About RHIT:

As part of Nevada's RHTP, the RHIT initiative focuses on helping providers implement practical, real-world technology solutions that improve care delivery for rural and frontier Nevadans.
